Chairman of the Board
Thomas E. J. de Witt
President

IN THIS ISSUE

On a warm, early autumn day in September, Lasell inaugurated its eighth president since 1851. Representatives from the Commonwealth of Massachusetts, the City of Newton, Harvard University, Endicott College, Wellesley College and more than 40 other New England colleges and universities joined Lasell faculty, staff, students and friends to welcome President Thomas E. J. de Witt.

"The future of Lasell lies with change," President de Witt told his inaugural audience. In this issue of the Lasell Bulletin, the new president is interviewed about some of the changes he is planning for Lasell. He is a man with a strong sense of history and a pragmatic view of the future. His goals are to improve the college's modern appeal while retaining its rich tradition.

Lasell's Early Childhood Education (ECE) program will be one of the first to reflect the effects of President de Witt's leadership. The Bulletin takes an in-depth look at one of the college's fastest-growing academic programs and the plans to expand this program's marketability.

Finally, meet the Cole/French family. Three generations of women in this family have attended Lasell. From the graduate of 1931 to the graduate of 1988, the Cole/French's provide a living example of how Lasell has changed, yet how it has remained the same over the years. See where we've been and where we are going through the lives of these alumnae.

Visions FOR LASELL

At his recent inauguration, Dr. Thomas E. J. de Witt — Lasell's eighth president in 137 years — accepted the challenge of leading the college into the 21st century, with "one eye to tradition and the other to the market place."

Lasell's new president plans to change the college's name, expand several programs to four-year, baccalaureate degree-granting status, and provide market appeal and economic stability for Lasell's future.

"Just as we seek to encourage women to empower themselves and to become risk-takers, so we as a small institution must be willing to reassess our role and its relevance for the future," President de Witt says. "But those dreams that we have, those risks we're willing to take, must be manageable. I want to set goals that we can achieve."

Lasell is at an important point in its history, he says, a point of view shared by many faculty and trustees.

Support from alumnae has never been stronger, but the college's enrollment is at its lowest point in 55 years. Students are seeking the special attention and support for growth that is offered at Lasell. But it is precisely because of that support, which builds self-confidence, that students leave Lasell to pursue more education. As more and more small colleges, and women's institutions in particular, disappear from the educational community, President de Witt is determined to keep Lasell alive and vibrant.

"Small colleges succeed because they do many things right. It's not one idea, one leader or one policy that makes the difference, it's doing all the little things and accomplishing goals through team effort," he says. "Faculty, administrators, staff, alumnae, students ... we're going to accomplish this together.

"Lasell will always remain primarily a two-year institution offering special attention to our students," President de Witt emphasizes. "However, we must respond to the needs of today's young women. Adding four-year programs offers students more choices, academically and in careers, and brings the college into the mainstream of women's higher education."

President de Witt's strong commitment to women's institutions is long-standing. Before accepting the leadership of Lasell, he served as executive vice president at Endicott College, director of finance and business affairs at Regis College and was a visiting assistant professor at Wellesley College. But even more than those experiences, he says that it is the influence of his wife, Margaret E. Ward, Ph.D, and family that have shaped his views and beliefs about women and education.

> "We must speak out boldly – and back up our words with actions – on the issues that continue to constrain professional opportunities for women."
> President de Witt, Inaugural Address

The new president's household on campus is typical of today's two-career families. Margaret is a full professor at Wellesley College and the couple has two young sons, Nelson, seven, and Derek, three. "We both work, we both take care of the home and the children," President de Witt says. "I always believed in helping at home with the dishes, shopping, sharing of childcare. Margaret and I support each other in our careers and share all aspects of our lives. It comes very naturally.

"The concept of social justice is one I learned while growing up. My mother was a union organizer in Canada and is a woman of strong moral convictions. Margaret heightened my understanding of both the opportunities and obstacles facing professional women. She is a strong supporter of women's rights and I'm also very attuned to this issue. It really has less to do with women because they are women and more to do with social injustices — abstract values established without ethical considerations," he says.

"Lasell has a proud tradition of speaking out for women. During my presidency, I intend to continue that tradition and the college will continue to introduce new programs responsive to women's needs."

President de Witt's vision for Lasell's future reaches into the next century. His goal is to establish Lasell as a vibrant institution with a regional reputation in key academic and career programs. Expanding Lasell's sought-after programs to four years is just a start.

"I would like to see a strong mix of two-year and four-year students and an international program offering women the experience of learning and living outside the United States," he says.

Plans are being formulated for a strengthened residential life program and improved athletic facilities. The establishment of an international program is already underway beginning with an exchange program with Shinonome Junior College in Japan.

President de Witt and wife Margaret E. Ward.

"We must offer choices, both personal and professional, which are relevant for the young women who will inherit – and provide leadership – in the 21st century."

President de Witt, Inaugural Address

"We need to become a real asset to the western Boston suburbs, a more prominent community resource," the president says. He seeks a more active community role for the college through providing corporate outreach, programs for career women, more child-care options for community families and even establishing a creative arts center for children's theatre and music and community events.

Most of all, President de Witt envisions a strong endowment that opens access to the college for more young women seeking Lasell's hallmark — special attention and support that helps build self-confidence. "We will continue to graduate articulate, resourceful, mature women, ready for the challenges of being successful and productive members of society — alumnae who can speak for themselves and for Lasell," he says.

"It would be tragic to not have women's institutions. And it would be a shame if students did not have the choice of a small college over a large university. There is a place for Lasell, there will be a need for Lasell, in the future."

BUILDING ON TRADITION

President de Witt believes in setting down-to-earth goals that will strengthen the college and provide for its vitality in the future.

Beginning with a change in the college's name from Lasell Junior College to Lasell College: A Two-Year College for Women, the president and Board of Trustees are looking to the marketplace and the needs of today's women to determine new directions for Lasell.

"The term 'junior' has negative connotations for many students today," President de Witt explains. "It is also limiting for our students because in many careers, an associate's degree is no longer considered adequate training."

In response to the need for more highly-trained graduates, the college is planning to expand its Early Childhood Education, Hotel, Restaurant and Travel Administration, and Fashion Merchandising/Retail programs from two-year to full, four-year, baccalaureate-degree granting status. "These are programs that are increasingly popular with our students. There is a growing demand for professionals in these fields and our programs are among the best in the state," President de Witt says.

"If we are going to continue to be responsive to the career aspirations of young women, we must offer them more choices."

Future choices may include: study at a center for Management and Entrepreneurial Studies for students aspiring to establish their own companies; experience at a bed and breakfast located in Plummer House, managed and run by students in the hotel program; and new programs in the areas of communication and daycare management.

"Lasell's new endeavors will be built upon its traditional strengths," President de Witt says with conviction. "We're not really attempting something new and different, we're just doing more of what we do very well."

Early Childhood Education: Growing and Changing

On Monday mornings, Lynda Hester, '89, heads for her "laboratory" to do her weekly research. But Lynda's "lab work" involves neither chemicals nor animals. Instead, she and another 57 students enrolled in the Early Childhood Education program learn from and eventually teach 50 pre-schoolers at Lasell's Rockwell Child Study Center.

"They have an excellent program here. We get experience working with the children and learn a lot about development in the classroom," says Lynda, who wants to be an elementary school teacher.

Lasell's Early Childhood Education (ECE) program is one of the most popular majors at the college. When the college administration decided to apply to the Massachusetts Board of Regents for permission to grant four-year degrees in some fields (see page 5), ECE was an obvious choice. The formal application will go to the Board of Regents next spring.

"We decided to expand the ECE program for a number of reasons, including the excellence of the curriculum and the way the Child Study Center offers students the opportunity for a hands-on teaching experience," says Cathy Livingston, Ph.D, interim dean of academic affairs.

"The college will retain the two-year option for those who wish to go directly into a career or transfer to another school," she explains. "But moving to a four-year program will make Lasell graduates even more competitive in the job market."

In addition to the expanded academic program, the college will also establish a new daycare center which will include an infant-toddler program. Slated to open next September, at the beginning of the academic year, the new center will be located in the Barn. Special renovations to the Barn to accommodate the daycare center will begin in December.

"The new center will give students the opportunity to work with a wider age-range of children," says Paula De Angelis Panchuck, assistant professor and director of ECE. Professor Panchuck works closely with Shirley Vara Gallerani, '53, who runs the Lasell Child Study Center in Rockwell House. Both are delighted with the growing popularity of the ECE program, (enrollment doubled with this year's freshman class), and the college's decision to add a daycare center with infant-toddler space.

"The new center will give students the opportunity to work with a wider age-range of children."

"Our enrollment is a sign that young people are attaching great importance to the teaching of young children," says Professor Panchuck, whose office is charmingly and appropriately decorated with toys, from stuffed animals to alphabet blocks.

"We were in the vanguard when we opened Rockwell in 1956 — there weren't too many nursery schools around then," she says. "With the new daycare center, we can offer the finest daycare just as, for 30 years, we have provided an outstanding preschool. We want to be responsive to the social need for daycare, and at the same time serve our students by providing more choices and opportunities for hands-on training."

Director Gallerani agrees that the new center can only enhance the strong theoretical-practical focus of the ECE program. In addition to the classes they take to satisfy Lasell's core curriculum requirements, the students enrolled in ECE take extra liberal arts classes and courses in psychology, early childhood development, and the exceptional child. Students planning to go directly into a career after graduation take additional courses in art, music, math and science for young children.

Their valuable teaching experience takes place at the Child Study Center in Rockwell House, a spacious stucco Victorian complete with three playgrounds.

As freshmen, students observe and take notes on Rockwell pre-school classes once a week, then discuss their observations in a weekly seminar. First-semester seniors attend the center four hours a week. In the second semester, students who plan to go directly to work upon graduation student-teach three days a week, designing and implementing activities under the direction of qualified teachers.

The Rockwell staff offers convincing proof that ECE graduates can be very successful in their field. Many of them attended Lasell. Besides director Gallerani, '53, Kathryn Morgan Lucey, '67, teaches three-year-olds, Anne Sutherland Rollins, '60, is assistant director and a teacher of the four-year-old class, and Patricia Ryan Cantin, '63, also teaches four-year-olds.

"All our staff are highly trained because they not only teach the children, they also supervise our Lasell students," explains director Gallerani.

"Unlike some colleges, which put a child study center under the supervision of the psychology department, ours is tied to the education department. We're training teachers, and that means our expectations are different."

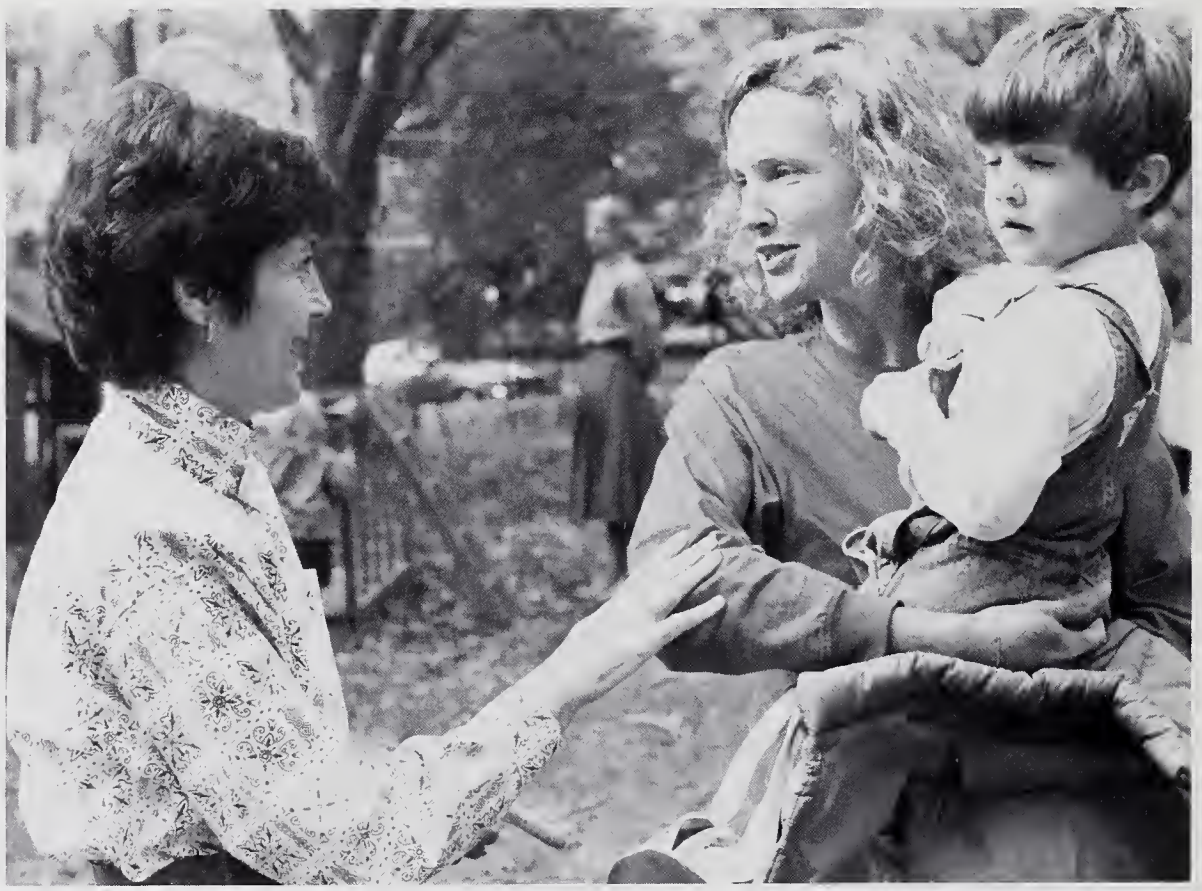

Andrea Hansen, '89, is one student who feels Lasell has given her just what she needs. "I came to Lasell because I liked the small-school atmosphere, and the people were nice. And because of the ECE program — I knew I wanted to work with children," she says. Andrea worked in a home-based daycare facility during her freshman year and hopes to open her own family child-care in Sherborn, Mass., after graduation next spring.

And after that?

"I'm waiting until Lasell gets its four-year accreditation. I want to come back for my B.A.," smiles Andrea.

Tradition is not a word to be taken lightly at the nation's oldest private two-year college for women, and for one Plymouth family the Lasell tradition is one that has been taken to heart, one generation to the next.

Mildred "Billie" Bell Cole started it all in 1929. She enrolled at Lasell during the year of the Great Depression. Since that time she has watched her two daughters graduate from Lasell and last June handed a diploma to her granddaughter, a member of the Class of '88.

But from the time Billie took that final walk to the "Crow's Nest" and held the torch for incoming freshmen, the white gloves have been exchanged for sweat pants, and fruit-punch mixers have given way to pizzas and videos.

"It's changed a lot since I was there," Billie remembers, looking back 59 years. "We had chapel every morning. You had to sit at a table at lunch and take turns playing hostess. There was Miss Potter, I remember, who used to hold get-togethers at the college on Sunday afternoons. 'Lilly Potter and her little white doves,' we used to say.

"The school has changed, but so have the needs of young women in society. It used to mean something if you went to Lasell — it still does."

By the time Billie's daughters, Barbara Cole French and Bette Cole Greene entered the classes of 1961 and 1963, Miss Mac, (Muriel McClelland) who was Billie's gym teacher, was director of the Physical Education Department. Her influence on students was still strong.

"Miss Mac had a way about her," reminisces Barbara. "She made you want to do your best and she always had a smile for you, even when you had blown it. You might say she inspired confidence."

A high point came for Billie when she encountered her favorite teacher 30 years after graduation as she showed her daughters around campus. "She remembered me and the time I hit a goal in soccer," Billie recounts.

"We used to joke with mom because she had the same gym teacher. I was always carrying messages back and forth for her," Bette says.

For Bette, a Lasell education gave her the chance to get closer to her mother and because she was going in as her sister was going out, gossip got infinitely easier and "still is," she says.

The "dungaree skirt" was the look of the time, perhaps what sweat pants are on today's campus. "We all wore them with fringed bottoms," Bette remembers. "The big activity before gym was sunbathing after a game of Whist at lunch. This you did in your dungaree skirt, of course."

Academics and athletics at Lasell have changed a lot since then. The afternoons when Bette's and Barbara's classes ended at 2 p.m. so the girls could get to crew and volleyball, are a thing of the past. As more and more young women entered the workforce, the college broadened its academic offerings and included practical hands-on experience in a number of fields to accommodate the changing educational needs of students. In a competitive world requiring women to make important decisions at home and at work, Lasell offered students more choices and opportunities.

"I treasure my experience at Lasell more as time goes on. As for my future daughter, I will let her make her own choice."

When Laura French, Barbara's daughter, entered Lasell she took advantage of those new opportunities. Laura was not interested in being a secretary like her mother and grandmother. She jumped into the college's first class in travel and tourism and decided to make it a career.

"I didn't really feel pressure to go to Lasell," Laura explains. "My mother always mentioned Lasell, but kept telling me she wouldn't feel hurt if I didn't go there. My grandmother even wrote me a letter about how I shouldn't feel pressured."

Laura made a stab at a local nursing college her first year out of high school, but in the end opted for a fresh start at Lasell. "I could have gone to a four-year college. But I deliberately chose to go to a two-year college. I needed the time and breathing space Lasell could give me," she says, adding that although she felt no pressure from her family to go to Lasell, the idea of keeping up the family tradition was particularly rewarding.

"I treasure my experience at Lasell more as time goes on. As for my future daughter, I will let her make her own choice," Laura says. "I felt an urge to keep the tradition going, the carrying on of a certain purpose, a history. I loved it when my grandmother would visit the campus for one of her millions of meetings on all the committees she chaired at the college. She would scurry about introducing me to all the people she knew."

Billie left Lasell to become a waitress, a social secretary, and a chauffeur before landing a stable job at the John Hancock Insurance Co. Barbara used her Lasell skills to become a medical secretary and supported herself in the years before marriage. Bette went into merchandising and modeling with the confidence inspired by Miss Mac and eventually settled into a life of teaching and high school administration. Laura works for Crimson Travel and will use her education to see the world.

"Just like my mother and grandmother, I was given the reins to do what I wanted with my education. So I did," says Laura. "The school has changed since grandmother's white glove days, but it is still a refining experience — especially when it's a family tradition of three generations."

New Team in Administration

With the recent inauguration of President Thomas E. J. de Witt, Lasell welcomes a number of new members to the administrative team.

Robert J. Kates, new director of marketing and external relations, comes to Lasell from Endicott College in Beverly, Mass., where he served as vice president of enrollment management. He will examine Lasell's external relations with counselors, professional organizations, and governing boards to build support for the admissions process.

Ruth Ann Brooks, formerly dean of continuing education, is now dean of admissions and financial aid. In her new position she will concentrate on student admissions from initial inquiries, to enrollment, through graduation.

Cathy Livingston, Ph.D., former director of the Learning Center and GATE program, now serves as the college's interim dean of academic affairs. As acting dean she will oversee all academic affairs including faculty needs, curricular issues, and student advising.

Barbara Creeden, director of institutional advancement, reports to the president on development, alumnae relations, and public affairs. Her duties include volunteer development, events management, and fundraising activities. Barbara most recently served as director of corporate and foundation support at Bentley College.

Kathleen O'Connor, former dean of admissions and financial aid, is now dean of student affairs. In her new role she will be responsible for student life.

Elizabeth Shurtleff Winter, '70, is now the vice president of administration and finance. She is responsible for all accounting functions and oversees the business office, the physical plant, and all college auxiliary enterprises.

Margaretta Barton Arnold continues to serve as executive assistant to the president, a post she has held since1984.

Nominate A Winner

A woman who served as president of the Alumnae Association and has actively supported the college since she graduated as a member of the Class of 1942 has been awarded the Lasell Medallion.

Dorothy "Dodie" Mosher Stone, '42, a college corporator, class secretary, class reunion coordinator, and former president of the Cape Cod Lasell Club, has been named the 1988 winner of the medallion.

Dorothy Mosher Stone '42, the 1988 Lasell Medallion recipient.

Dodie, who graduated with a degree in merchandising and then joined the Navy during World War II as an electrician in naval communications, was president of the Alumnae Association from 1957 to 1959.

The Lasell Medallion is the Alumnae Association's highest award. It is presented annually to a "member of the Lasell Junior College family who, by virtue of distinguished service to the college or to society at large, has brought added honor to the name Lasell."

Dodie is married to Walter Stone, a member of the Lasell Board of Trustees. When she is not busy with her five married children and 11 grandchildren, or tending to her Lasell alumnae duties, Dodie works with the U.S. Coastguard Auxiliary, where she teaches search and rescue. She is also active in the New Seabury Women's Club and the Mashpee Garden Club.

Nominations for the medallion are considered annually by a panel of the Lasell Alumnae Association, including the president of the college and the alumnae secretary. Medallion Committee Chairperson Martha Keyes Tucker welcomes next year's nominations through March 1, 1989.

Alumnae should explain in writing to the committee why their nominee should be considered for the medallion. Applications should list the nominee's accomplishments and include how she/he has brought "added honor to the name Lasell." Entries should be submitted to Mrs. John M. Tucker, 31 Byron Road, Weston, MA 02193.

New Chairman Named to Development Committee

Kathleen Rebmann Royka, '64, has been named the new chairman of the development committee of the Board of Trustees. Kathleen, who majored in art at Lasell and earned her B.A. in social work at Regis College, brings with her 12 years of professional and volunteer experience in fundraising.

Kathleen was president of the Alumnae Association from 1981 through 1984 and is a long-standing member of the Alumnae Board of Management.

Currently employed in corporate and foundation development at Easter Seals, Kathleen plans to develop strategies and policies that will help Lasell grow and remain strong.

"I hope to increase support for the college at a time when institutions of higher education are at a crossroads," she says. "With fewer students in the overall population, development becomes very important to keep smaller institutions growing and strong."

Kathleen lives in Wellesley and has one daughter. She is also involved in the study of French and post-impressionist art.

DONOR REPORT

Alumnae president, Gertrude "Bunny" Quinn McKenna, '46, greets Lasell's new president, Thomas E. J. de Witt.

Dear Alumnae and Friends:

Late last autumn, Lasell successfully completed its ambitious capital campaign, exceeding the original goal of $1.2 million by a comfortable margin. The enthusiasm generated during The Campaign for Lasell set the tone for continued strong performance by the Annual Fund, toward which $128,193.75 was contributed in 1987-88.

Lasell's fund raising program provides a wonderful opportunity for alumnae and friends alike to meet the current and future needs of the College's students, while holding fast to the principles that have guided us since Lasell's founding.

In the report that follows, we are pleased to present a listing of all donors to the 1987-88 Lasell Annual Fund, along with a summary of new contributions to The Campaign for Lasell made since September 1, 1987. With this report comes Lasell's deepest gratitude to all alumnae and friends for their thoughtful support.

Sincerely,

Bunny McKenna
